ALTO DIVIDE SAMPLES $41

Joseph Mayer, manager of the Alto Divide, reported this morning that the paystreak in the drift mine to the south of the intersection with the crosscut shows a width of 6 inches that carries $41. This shows a steady improvement that is very gratifying to the management which looks for greater stability of values as the drift proceeds.

Values at the intersection have $26 for the width of one foot in the Alto No. 2 claim of that company at a point close to the side line of the Arkansas claim of the Old Zone.

This is the first one ever found east of the Tonopah-Goldfield anteroad in the southeastern part of the district, and a number of features connected with the discovery make the chances good for opening ore of sufficient grade and width to ship. The find was made several months ago in the southeast crosscut on the 400-foot, or bottom, level, but because of general conditions no statement was made at that time. The southeast crosscut is 260 feet long, and the ore occurs in a four-foot point. The north drift is expected to reach to 120 feet, the junction of the vein striking north and a more important vein striking southeast along the Arkansas line and dipping into Zone ground from the Alto below the 400-foot level of the latter. After this drift has been driven to the junction of the veins it will be turned southeast in the vein striking in this direction. The south drift will be driven to intersect the so-called Garvey vein of the Tonopah Divide.

The group is situated in the new Silver Hills district formerly known as the largely section of Tule canyon and is regarded as having greater possibilities than either the built or jagged groups which are described by the Tule syndicate. The location is about one mile southeast of the junction and is regarded as one of the greatest gold prospects ever acted upon in Nevada, as the main ledge measuring 100 feet in width samples at the rate of 12 ounces to the ton. The group will be incorporated as the South Silver Hills Mining company.

The Cadillac group was located two years ago by William F. Ray, P. H. W. Nunnery and Al. Henderson, an outfit who dug up a ledge extending for a distance of 300 feet. The only development has been with a 30-foot shaft. The location leads the name to Stimler.

Before the end of the month Nye county will have a new silver, lead and gold producer operating at the old camp at Tybo which was one of the very earliest developments of mining and reduction in southern Nevada. The furnaces have been completed and the owners, known as the Louisiana Consolidated Mining company, are looking for an extraction of 80 per cent recovery on lead, 90 per cent in gold and 85 per cent in silver, according to test made by the Stimler Equipment company of Salt Lake. The South western Sampling company of Los Angeles and the Henry Wood laboratory at Denver. This company has nothing in common with the former management except that it has assumed the burden of debts bequeathed to that organization which made such a lamentable failure of its attempt to operate the property at a profit.

Some idea of the magnitude of the present undertaking may be gleaned from the fact that the operations call for $300,000 a month work on a scale which will be furnished by the stockholders whose wealth may be grasped when the personnel of the official roster is considered as follows: Julius Stober, the president is president of the U. S. Cotton of Investors association, Herman Lawriter, vice president, is head of the S. R. Lawriter & Sons, woolen goods manufacturers who operate more woolen mills than any other concern outside the American Woolens company. Fred Hausman, one of the directors, is a member of the prominent Wall street firm of A. A. Hausman & Company who married the widow of the late Marcus Bernheim, the original partner of the Tybo mine. F. R. Osborne is treasurer of the Merchants' Manufacturers' company of Fall River, Mass. prominently referred to in the cotton trust (H. S. Nichols, the general manager and treasurer is now in Tonopah. The management is headed by F. W. Draper, one of the world's best known mining engineers, who was previously associated with the platinum mines of Russia where he has been the sole owner. The company was designed into the war and managed to escape to Japan with $2,000,000 worth of platinum in bar form, which for the time of the United States.

The Louisiana firm has bought the old mine, the Lawrence, Mannahan and Belmont and extended the ore line from there to Tybo which was located in 1908, during George W. Peckham's time. The Tybo mine which is believed the first location was discovered at a mine and built in 1908.
